

Expand your company by downsizing your files

A computer support company from Sunderland has launched a dynamic new product that enables local small business to clear out their clutter and save all their information onto DVD.

For companies counting the cost of recession, money saving initiatives are vital and DaMtech's new Digital Document Archiving service could be the answer.

Darren Jarrett, Business Partner and Senior Support Engineer, expressed: "With environmental practices being adopted by many businesses such as recycling, and finances being tightened over the past few years, Digital Document Archiving is a Win/Win service."

Their investment in new technologies means DaMtech can turn any paper file into a digital copy, fitting roughly a full 3-Draw filing cabinet onto a single DVD.

Matt Jenkinson, Business Partner and Senior Support Engineer, commented: "It is perfect for businesses with precious storage space, and little money to expand.

"Digital Files are searchable, meaning if you're looking for a certain word or phrase, with a few clicks you've got it. It's also easier to find and get access to your files without having to search your storage room or visit your off-site facility."

Teaming up with the UK's leading antivirus and security software and investing in online backup and collaboration services, DaMtech are constantly finding new ways to help small businesses succeed with their IT.

The launch of this new Digital Document Archiving service marks the anniversary of their first year in business, with Darren and Matt founders of DaMtech Limited, deciding to go it alone and set up their own business in May 2009 after a decade in the industry.
